SOURCE: REPORTS FILED WITH THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES AND SECRETARY OF THE SENATE. DEBT FIGURES, HOWEVER, WERE OBTAINED FROM THE GORE REPORT FOR 1956 AND DIRECTLY FROM THE NATIONAL COMMITTEES FOR 1960.

Candidates, Committees Report $28.3 Million Spent In 1960; Actual Spending Far Greater

TOTAL expenditures of $28,326,322 in the Presidential and Congressional election campaign of 1960 are included in the reports of 189 political committees, 67 Senate candidates and 825 House candidates, filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives and the Secretary of the Senate. Of the $28.3 million total, $23.5 million was reported by national-level committees and $4.8 by candidates and committees in individual Congressional campaigns.

The Democratic National Committee, however, was known to have had a deficit of $3,820,000 in unpaid campaign expenses at the end of 1960, and the Republican National Committee a debt of $750,000.

When these are considered, the total reported cost of the 1960 election campaign comes to $32,-896,322.

As the discussion below indicates, even this total is far below the actual money spent in 1960 on politics, which has been estimated as high as $175 million. This Congressional Quarterly Special Report, however, is the only detailed analysis of the figures that are available, as reported to Congress.

The political spending reports, filed under the requirements of the Federal Corrupt Practices Act of 1925, were reviewed in close detail by CQ. This Special Report, based on several months of detailed transcribing of the reports in the Clerk's and the Secretary's offices, lists the total expenditures and receipts of all reporting committees and candidates, all reported contributions of $500 or more (by name of individual or organization). It also gives representative expenditure breakdowns for major committees.

The committees and candidates reported having received total contributions of $28,719,860. Of this, $24,172,857 was reported received on the national level and $4,547,002 in individual Senate and House races.

Major Trends

The 1960 reports show the Democrats and Republicans drawing much closer together in their level of campaign spending in a Presidential election. Whereas, in 1952 and 1956, the Republicans accounted for more than 59 percent of the total national spending, they are down to 46.1 percent in 1960. The Democrats went up from 25.1 percent in 1952 and 29.2 percent in 1956 to 42.0 percent in 1960. National-level Democrats reported spending $11,800,979 in 1960; Republicans, $12,950,232.

It is customary to assume that most labor political spending has gone to Democrats in recent national campaigns. If the reports of the Democrats are combined with those of labor, they show that the Democratic-Labor combined percentage went from 35.2 percent in 1952 and 37.3 percent in 1956 to 50.8 percent in 1960. Total Democratic and Labor national-level spending in 1960 was $14,251,923. These figures include the reported Democratic and Republican deficits.

Republican House and Senate candidates put together also reported spending more than Democratic Congressional candidates. Republican candidates reported a total of $2,523,869; Democratic candidates, $2,249,719.

Thus, in total expenditures of $28.3 million in the Presidential and Congressional campaigns combined, not including debts, Republicans reported $14.7 million; Democrats, $10.2 million; Labor, $2.5 million, and the remaining $0.92 million was recorded by minor parties and unaffiliated political groups.

Figures Open to Dispute

The reported figures should be viewed with considerable skepticism because of the serious gaps which exist in the reporting requirements of the Corrupt Practices Act of 1925.

That act requires that periodic reports of receipts and expenditures be filed by national political committees or their subsidiaries or other committees seeking to influence elections in two or more states. Reports of personal campaign expenses must be made by individual Senate and House candidates. Individuals who spend $50 or more (other than in contributions to political committees), for the purpose of influencing elections in two or more states, must also make reports. (No individuals made such reports in 1960).

The Corrupt Practices Act does not require, however, any reports of contributions or expenditures in either Presidential or Congressional primary campaigns, or in connection with a party's Presidential nomination -- even though these efforts involve millions of dollars of expenses. Nor does the Act require reports of political committees, as long as they confine their activities to a single state and are not subsidiaries of national political committees. Committees working within a single state in behalf of any Senate or House candidate are not required to report -- even though the great bulk of Congressional campaign expenditures are made by such committees.

Costs Higher than Reported

Because of these limitations, the reports filed with the House Clerk give only an incomplete and rough approximation of true campaign costs. Some individual estimates of the entire cost of the 1960 primaries and elections for all offices have gone as high as $175 million.

A good example of how full information on campaign contributions is lost under the existing regulations is seen in the fact that not one member of the Kennedy family* appears in the long list of contributors of $500 or more beginning on page 1067 of this Special Report. As the Kennedys are very wealthy and had a considerable interest in the 1960 campaign, it is inconceivable that such contributions were not made by members of the family. Similar examples of both Republicans and Democrats help to explain why the reported contributions are considered much lower than the actual total.

In 1957, the Senate Rules and Administration Privileges and Elections Subcommittee, headed by Sen. Albert Gore (D Tenn.), conducted a full investigation into 1956 campaign spending. (1957 Almanac p. 187) The Subcommittee concluded that about $33 million had been spent on campaigns for federal offices, approximately $20.7 million or 62.3 percent of the total by Republican committees. No such study of 1960 spending was made by any Congressional committee.

In contrast to the nationally reported figures, a specialist in this field, Alexander Heard, estimated that the actual total costs of the 1952 political campaigning came to $140 million and that "expenditures probably rose in 1956."†

One factor causing possible distortion in reported figures is the great amount of duplication in expenditures of the two major parties. Local organizations give to state groups, state organizations give to national committees. The national groups, in turn, may return parts of the same funds to state or local groups. But while this factor may tend to inflate figures, it is counteracted somewhat by the many valuable services furnished candidates or committees which are never reported as cash receipts.

CQ has not indicated the effect of these inter-committee transfers because of the danger of distortion due to inadequate reporting by the committees. However, an independent study‡ which did indicate the known transfers, using CQ-gathered data, shows that transfers have relatively insignificant effect on the total contributions-spending picture.

Cabinet Contributors

Only two members of President Kennedy's Cabinet were listed by committee reports filed with the Clerk of the House as making campaign contributions of $500 or more. Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg was listed as giving $750 to the Democratic National Committee. Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon and his wife contributed $26,550 -- all to Republican organizations -- reports show.

Contributors to Both Parties

Following is a list of individuals who appeared to have made contributions of $500 or more to some committees of both parties, according to reports filed with the Clerk of the House.

Albert E. Wilkinson, Washington, D.C. -- Republicans: Jan. 14, $550. -- Democrats: Jan. 15, $500.

"Expenditures" by the committees do not altogether indicate total expenses, but usually expenses billed and paid for. In most cases, the expenditures were increased as additional bills were received and paid in 1961. (These additional 1960 campaign expenditures, if reported, will be listed in CQ's survey of 1961 political spending reports, later in the year.)

*One exception, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, the President's mother-in-law, who was reported to have contributed $500 to the Citizens for Kennedy-Johnson (see p. 1080).

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS OF $500 OR MORE REPORTED FOR 1960

Listed below are all 1960 campaign contributions of $500 or more, made either by individuals or political committees, which were included in reports submitted by political committees to the Clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Contributions to primary campaigns and contributions to political committees operating within the borders of a single state need not be reported.

Contributor lists have been organized by the state of the contributor, as reported to the Clerk. In some cases persons have recorded contributions from addresses in different states.

Given first under each state heading are contributions from individual persons in alphabetical order of the donors' names; given separately below that listing, also in alphabetical order, are the names of political committees in the state recorded as having made contributions to other committees (such as a contribution by a state political organization to the national headquarters, etc.).

The date and amount of each contribution are noted separately. The recipient political organizations are noted by a code (DNC for Democratic National Committee, NRCC for National Republican Congressional Committee, etc.). (See key to code, page 1059)

The Corrupt Practices Act of 1925 makes it illegal for one person to give more than $5,000 to any one group or individual, but permits a person to give that amount to any number of different organizations (18 U.S. Code 608). Family members are regarded individually under the law. (See discussion of some large family contributions in 1960, p. 1109).

The Corrupt Practices Act also makes it illegal for either labor unions or corporations to make political contributions (18 U.S. Code 610). Labor unions set up political education committees or leagues which, in turn, make political contributions.

In some cases anonymous gifts were made and are noted below. They, too, are specifically prohibited by law (2 U.S. Code 244).

Amounts of all contributors listed are rounded off to the nearest dollar.

INDIVIDUALS -- A.H. Reed, Cheyenne, Oct. 26, $1,000, NRCC.

Family Contributions

Following is a list of selected families and their apparent total contributions of $500 or more made to political organizations during 1960 as reported to the Clerk of the House. Similar figures for the 1956 election year reported by the Senate Privileges and Elections Subcommittee are somewhat higher. The Subcommittee had access to a larger number of organizations included, in some cases, contributions of $100 or more and examined state records as well as federal records.

The following CQ tabulations should be considered more of a "spot-check" nature rather than fully comprehensive.

SELECTED 1960 CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES OF $100 OR MORE

Listed below are 1960 campaign expenditures of $100 or more reported by committees engaging in political activities, to have been made to candidates or organizations included in reports submitted by the committees to the Clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives. (For list of committees and total receipts and expenditures see p. 1059.)

Expenditures are listed under the committee making them. Given first under each committee heading are expenditures made to candidates and committees supporting a particular candidate for the U.S. Senate, U.S. House of Representatives, state governorships and, in some cases, other state offices. These are listed in alphabetical order by candidate. The second category under each committee shows expenditures made to organizations supporting no particular candidate, more than one candidate, or Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates. These are listed in alphabetical order by organization.

Following every individual expenditure is the location of the recipient, when available; the date of the expenditure; and the amount.

In some cases a committee spent much, or all, of its money on direct campaign costs (such as radio-TV, postage, printing, transportation, etc.) which are not included in this listing. Because of this some committees which have a relatively high expenditure total will not show a proportionate amount of contributions to candidates or organizations.

Amounts of all expenditures listed are rounded off to the nearest dollar.

RECEIPTS, SPENDING REPORTED IN 1960 BY SENATE CANDIDATES

Each candidate for the Senate is required by law to file with the Secretary of the Senate both pre- and post-election reports of his personal receipts and expenditures.

Below is a state-by-state list showing candidates total personal receipts, contributions from labor groups, receipts originating in states other than the candidate's own and total expenditures. Total receipts include labor and out-of-state receipts. Only a partial record of out-of-state receipts is possible, as not all candidates listed addresses of contributors.

Candidates report expenditures in two parts. Expenditures which need not be reported individually are those for any charge made by a candidate's state for his candidacy, such as filing fee; any personal expenses of the candidate, such as travelling and meals; and stationery, postage, writing or printing costs (except for use in newspapers and billboards), distribution of literature and letters and telephone and telegraph costs. These expenditures are not limited and a single sum is reported for all. All other expenditures must be itemized and limited by a formula determined by multiplying the number of voters in the last general Senatorial election by three cents, and must not exceed $25,000. Total expenditures in the chart include both itemized and non-itemized expenditures as reported.

Of 34 Senatorial races in 1960, three were unopposed. Since candidates are not required to report primary election receipts and expenditures, candidates running unopposed usually report no money received or spent. Candidates who channeled all their financing through committees also may report no personal receipts and expenditures.

Committees working for candidates are not required to file reports with the Secretary of the Senate unless they are working in two or more states or are a branch of a national group other than a political party. Many candidates appended statements to their reports stating that committees were working in their behalf. These committees are often required to file reports with their state. A number of candidates included reports of one or more committees with their personal reports. Such candidates are indicated in the footnotes.

A list of individuals and groups reported as contributing $500 or more to any Senatorial campaign will be found on page 1132.

1960 REPORTS OF RECEIPTS, SPENDING OF HOUSE CANDIDATES

Each candidate for the House of Representatives is required by law to file with the Clerk of the House both pre- and post-election reports of his personal receipts and expenditures.

2 Below is a district-by-district chart showing candidates' total personal receipts, receipts from labor groups, receipts originating in states other than the candidate's own and total expenditures. Total receipts include labor and out-of-state receipts. Only a partial record of out-of-state receipts is possible because not all candidates listed addresses of contributors.

Candidates report expenditures in two parts. Expenditures which need not be reported individually are those for any charge made by a candidate's state for his candidacy, such as a filing fee; any personal expenses of the candidate, such as travelling and meals; and stationery, postage, writing or printing costs (except for use in newspapers or on billboards), distribution of letters and circulars and telephone and telegraph costs. These expenditures are not limited and a single sum is reported for all. All other expenditures must be itemized. These are limited by law according to the number of voters in the candidate's district (three cents times the total number of votes cast in the last general election for all House candidates in the respective candidate's district) and must not exceed $5,000. Total expenses in the chart include both itemized and non-itemized expenditures, as reported.

Candidates are not required to report primary election expenses. Therefore, many candidates who were unopposed in the general election list no receipts or expenditures.

NUMBER REPORTING

825 candidates of the Republican, Democratic and other parties filed either one or two reports with the Clerk of the House. (Candidates who filed no final report are indicated by an asterisk.) 66 candidates filed no report at all.

Committees working for candidates were not required to file reports with the Clerk of the House unless they were working in two or more states or were a branch of a national group other than a political party. Many candidates had such committees working in their behalf and a number of candidates appended statements to their personal reports indicating that they had committees supporting them. Certain of these committees sent their own reports to the Clerk of the House. Candidates whose committees submitted reports are marked by a † on the following chart. (For names and total receipts and expenditures of these committees see list of groups on page 1059.) Committee report figures are not included in candidates' personal totals except where a footnote specifically states that this is the case.

A list of individuals or groups reported as contributing $500 or more to House candidates will be found on page 1143.
